

University Authors 2022

MONTCLAIR STATE UNIVERSITY

Dear Colleagues:

On behalf of Darianne Mizzy, Dean of Library Services and myself, I am pleased to acknowledge and celebrate Montclair State University's authors and artists. Even with the extraordinary challenges of the COVID-19 pandemic, Montclair faculty and staff produced an impressive collection of scholarly and artistic works.

It matters that we acknowledge and affirm one another's scholarly achievements since the reputation of the University is always finally a collective reputation to which we each contribute and each lay claim.

To our current authors and artists, congratulations and to all our colleagues, we look forward to honoring you next year or some year soon. As before, we have included this year any works missed in previous booklets.

Harvey Araton
Our Last Season: A Writer, a Fan, a Friendship
Penguin Press, 2020
Professor Araton is in the School of Communication and Media.

The moving story of a bond between sportswriter and fan that was forged in a shared love of basketball and grew over several decades into an extraordinary friendship. The author is one of New York’s – and the nation’s – best-known sports journalists, having covered thousands of Knicks games over the course of a long and distinguished career. But the person at the heart of Our Last Season, Michelle Musler, is largely anonymous – except, that is, to the players, coaches and writers who have passed through Madison Square Garden, where she held season tickets behind the Knicks bench for 45 years.

Vanessa E. Greenwood
Navigating Media Literacy: A Pedagogical Tour of Disneyland
Myers Education Press, 2020
Professor Greenwood is in the School of Communication and Media.

This work is an education playbook applied to the vast mediated universe of Disney. Readers of all ages can critically apply media literacy principles while still conscientiously participating as consumer-citizens, media creators and agents of change. Media literacy is defined throughout this book as an instructional method rather than a political movement. The book counterbalances the frequently myopic critiques of cultural scholars and the critical exemption granted by those across the world who find Disney to be a source of great pleasure. Integrated theory and practical examples allow readers to investigate for themselves and draw their own conclusions based on real inquisitive, observatory and creative experiences that constitute media literacy. Each chapter is ideologically mapped to an actual physical realm of Disneyland (e.g., Main Street, USA; Adventureland; Tomorrowland; Frontierland; Fantasyland). Each site provides a pedagogical playground for experimenting with each media literacy concept. The reader will come away with a deeper pedagogical understanding of how to cultivate media literacy using any context or subject – not just Disney.

Kaled K. Hameide
Managing Fashion: A Management Perspective
Routledge, 2021
Professor Hameide is in the Department of Art and Design.

The fashion industry is a multibillion-dollar global industry with a variety of organizational structures and a multitude of challenges. Such scope triggered the recent rise in management programs in the U.S. and Europe aiming to produce and train young managers to meet such global and diverse challenges. Managing Fashion covers the fashion business with a twist – a management twist. Its goal is to tackle the topics from a fashion manager perspective referencing relevant management concepts and theories, thus offering a deeper and more practical dimension to the issues addressed. It offers a balanced mix of fashion and management, theory and application, as well as creating an opportunity for analysis and critical thinking. Discussions throughout the book are supported by specially developed case studies and relevant examples taken from the fashion industry. It is an opportunity to expose the fashion student or reader, as well as aspiring fashion managers, to a more practical approach to fashion theories and issues.

Matthew Clauhs, Bryan Powell, Ann Callistro Clements
Popular Music Pedagogies: A Practical Guide for Music Teachers
Routledge, 2021
Professor Powell is in the John J. Cali School of Music.

This book provides readers with a solid foundation of playing and teaching a variety of instruments and technologies, and then examines how these elements work together in a comprehensive school music program. With individual chapters designed to stand independently, instructors can adapt this guide to a range of learning abilities and teaching situations by combining the pedagogies and methodologies presented. This textbook is an ideal resource for preservice music educators enrolled in popular music education, modern band, or secondary general methods coursework and K-12 music teachers who wish to create or expand popular music programs in their schools.

Eudaimonia: Perspectives for Music Learning
Routledge, 2020
Professor Silverman is in the John J. Cali School of Music.

This book asserts the fertile applications of eudaimonia – an Aristotelian concept of human flourishing intended to explain the nature of a life well lived – for work in music learning and teaching in the 21st century. Drawing insights from within and beyond the field of music education, contributors reflect on what the “good life” means in music, highlighting issues at the core of the human experience and the heart of schooling and other educational settings. This pursuit of personal fulfillment through active engagement is considered in relation to music education as well as broader social, political, spiritual, psychological and environmental contexts. Especially pertinent in today’s complicated and contradictory world, the book is a concise compendium on this oft-overlooked concept, providing musicians with an understanding of an ethically guided and socially meaningful music-learning paradigm.

Managing Classroom Assessment to Enhance Student Learning
Routledge, 2020
Professor Barnes and Professor Fives are in the Department of Educational Foundations.

As teachers are required to integrate an increasing number of assessment practices into the classroom, it is crucial that they have effective routines for organizing and evaluating the generated data. This book introduces pre- and in-service teachers to the major categories of assessment management and provides empirical and theoretical support for their effectiveness. In-depth chapters consider management in the context of assigning and collecting work, interpreting and organizing assessment results, and providing students with feedback.

Harvard Education Press, 2020
LB2822.8 .B86 2020
Professor Bulkley is in the Department of Educational Leadership.

In this book, a team of leading education scholars offers a rich comparative analysis of the set of urban education governance reforms collectively known as the “portfolio management model.” They investigate the degree to which this model – a system of schools operating under different types of governance and with different degrees of autonomy – challenges the standard structure of district governance famously characterized by David Tyack as “the one best system.”

Zoë Burkholder
An African American Dilemma: A History of School Integration and Civil Rights in the North
Oxford University Press, 2021
LC214.22.N67 B87 2021
Professor Burkholder is in the Department of Educational Foundations.

This book offers the first social history of northern Black debates over school integration versus separation from the 1840s to the present. Since Brown v. Board of Education in 1954 Americans have viewed school integration as a central tenet of the Black civil rights movement. Yet, school integration was not the only – or even always the dominant – civil rights strategy. At times, African Americans also fought for separate, Black-controlled schools dedicated to racial uplift and community empowerment. The book offers a social history of these debates within northern Black communities from the 1840s to the present. Drawing on sources including the Black press, school board records, social science studies, the papers of civil rights activists and court cases, it reveals that northern Black communities, urban and suburban, vacillated between a preference for either school integration or separation during specific eras. Yet, there was never a consensus. It also highlights the chorus of dissent, debate and counter-narratives that pushed families to consider a fuller range of educational reforms. A sweeping historical analysis that covers the entire history of public education in the North, this work complicates our understanding of school integration by highlighting the diverse perspectives of Black students, parents, teachers and community leaders all committed to improving public education. It finds that Black school integrationists and separatists have worked together in a dynamic tension that fueled effective strategies for educational reform and the Black civil rights movement, a discussion that continues to be highly charged in present-day schooling choices.

Integrations: The Struggle for Racial Equality and Civic Renewal in Public Education
The University of Chicago Press, 2021
LC213.2 .B58 2021
Professor Burkholder is in the Department of Educational Foundations.

The promise of a free, high-quality public education is supposed to guarantee every child a shot at the American dream. But our widely segregated schools mean that many children of color do not have access to educational opportunities equal to those of their white peers. In this book, the authors investigate what this country’s long history of school segregation means for achieving just and equitable educational opportunities in the United States. The work focuses on multiple marginalized groups in American schooling: African Americans, Native Americans, Latinxs and Asian Americans. The authors show that in order to grapple with integration in a meaningful way, we must think of integration in the plural, both in its multiple histories and in the many possible definitions of and courses of action for integration. Ultimately, the authors show, integration cannot guarantee educational equality and justice, but it is an essential component of civic education that prepares students for life in our multiracial democracy.

María Cioè-Peña
(M)othering Labeled Children: Bilingualism and Disability in the Lives of Latinx Mothers
Multilingual Matters, 2021
LC3983.N7 C56 2021
Professor Cioè-Peña is in the Department of Educational Foundations.

This book takes a distinctive approach to exploring the experiences and identities of minoritized Latinx mothers who are raising a child who is labeled as both an emergent bilingual and dis/abled. It showcases relationships between families and schools and reveals the myriad of ways in which school-based decisions regarding disability, language and academic placement impact family dynamics. Treating the mothers as experts, this book uses testimonies to explore not only what mothers know but also how they develop funds of knowledge and how they apply them to their child’s education. The stories shed light on how mothers perceive their child’s disability, how they engage with their child and the value they place on bilingualism. The narratives reveal the complex lives mothers lead and the ways in which they strive to meet the academic and socioemotional needs of their children, regardless of the financial, physical and emotional costs to them. This book has significant implications for researchers and professionals working in bilingual education, special education, inclusive education and disability studies in education.

The Power of Presence: A Guide to Mindfulness Practices in Early Childhood
Gryphon House, Inc., 2020
Professor Erwin is in the Department of Teaching and Learning.

This book is written for today's educators who feel pressured by unrealistic demands, are overwhelmed by the daily chaos of early childhood teaching, and seek to find peace in their classrooms. Find and foster your own awareness. Cultivate and encourage mindfulness practices in your classroom. Nurture mindfulness, openness, curiosity, and calm throughout the day. Create an inclusive classroom that accepts and encourages all children. A more peaceful, present learning environment will help children to reclaim their safe, joyful, confident and competent approach to learning. The adults in the children's lives, whether families or educators, will also thrive in this mindful approach with more patience, focus and confidence. Together, they'll be able to breathe in blue skies and reach new heights of learning.

The Co-Teacher's Guide: Intensifying Instruction Beyond One Teach, One Support
Routledge, 2021
Professor Goeke is in the Department of Teaching and Learning.

This pragmatic guide provides concrete, detailed strategies for co-teachers looking to expand their instructional methods and involvement beyond the One Teach, One Support model. Including step-by-step examples, practical scenarios and visuals of successful implementations to help teachers quickly and effectively put these tools into practice, each chapter also highlights specific tensions that can arise in the co-teaching partnership and frames effective solutions to move beyond them efficiently and effectively. While designed for both teachers in a co-teaching pair, the book's tools can easily be applied on individually, making this an ideal resource for co-teachers with limited common planning time.

Gareth B. Matthews, The Child's Philosopher
Routledge, 2022

Professor Gregory is in the Department of Educational Foundations.

This book brings together groundbreaking essays by renowned American philosopher Gareth B. Matthews in three fields he helped to initiate: philosophy in children's literature, philosophy for children, and philosophy of childhood. In addition, contemporary scholars critically assess Matthews' pioneering efforts and his legacy. Gareth B. Matthews (1929-2011) was a specialist in ancient and medieval philosophy who had conversations with young children, discovering that they delight in philosophical puzzlement and that their philosophical thinking often enriched his own understanding. Those conversations became the impetus for a substantial component of Matthews' scholarship, from which this book features essays spanning the length of his career.

Data Analysis, Interpretation, and Theory in Literacy Studies Research: A How-To Guide

Myers Education Press, 2020
Professor Knobel is in the Department of Teaching and Learning.

Novice and early career researchers often have difficulty with understanding how theory, data analysis and interpretation of findings “hang together” in a well-designed and theorized qualitative research investigation and with learning how to draw on such understanding to conduct rigorous data analysis and interpretation of their analytic results. This book demonstrates how to design, conduct and analyze a well put together qualitative research project. Using their own successful studies, chapter authors spell out a problem area, research question and theoretical framing, carefully explaining their choices and decisions. They then show in detail how they analyzed their data, and why they took this approach. Finally, they demonstrate how they interpreted the results of their analysis, to make them meaningful in research terms. Approaches include interactional sociolinguistics, microethnographic discourse analysis, multimodal analysis, iterative coding, conversation analysis and multimediated discourse analysis, among others.

Reading, Writing and Racism: Disrupting Whiteness in Teacher Education and in the Classroom
Beacon Press, 2021
LC212.2 .P53 2021
Professor Picower is in the Department of Teaching and Learning.

This book is an examination of how whiteness and racial bias are systemically entrenched in schools, and radical strategies to transform teacher education programs and advance racial justice. An examination of how curriculum choices can perpetuate white supremacy, and radical strategies for how schools and teacher education programs can disrupt and transform racism in education. When racist curriculum “goes viral” on social media, it is typically dismissed as an isolated incident from a “bad” teacher. The author, however, holds that racist curriculum isn’t an anomaly. It’s a systemic problem that reflects how whiteness is embedded and reproduced in education.

This book explores relevant concepts of bilingualism for pre-service Spanish/English bilingual teachers in the United States. This volume is reader-friendly while presenting complex theoretical content. It is the first of its kind to seamlessly switch between the English and Spanish languages for academic purposes. This book fills a gap in the academic literature related to translanguaging as a modern and global phenomenon. The authors invite bilingual educators to develop translingual classrooms with bilingual students in which academic English and Spanish are intentionally mixed. Volume contributors center their discussions on theory, practice and action as they reflect on their own bilingual journeys. Features such as glossary terms, discussion questions and intentional reflection on each author's bilingual journey make it innovative and a must read in all bilingual teacher preparation programs in the nation.

Constructing Authentic Relationships in Clinical Practice: Working at the Intersection of Therapist and Client Identities

Routledge, Taylor & Francis Group, 2022

RC489.S43 C66 2022

Professor Van Eeden-Moorefield is in the Department of Family Science and Human Development.

Bringing together a collection of insightful and experienced clinicians, this book examines the ways in which intersectionality influences all phases of clinical and supervisory work, from outreach, assessment and through to termination. Integrating research with clinical practice, chapters not only examine the theoretical, intersectional location of the self for the therapist, client or supervisee, but they also consider how this social identity effects the therapeutic process and, crucially, work with clients. The book includes first-hand accounts, case studies and reflections to demonstrate how interactions are influenced by gender, race and sexuality, offering practical ideas about how to work intentionally and ethically with clients.

Teachable Moments: Educated Hope in Times of Crisis

DIO Press Inc, 2021

LB1027 .W44 2021

Professor Weiner is in the Department of Educational Foundations.

This book is a collection of essays about education, cultural politics and practices of self-care that are connected by their focus on the essential lessons we can learn from everyday experiences in times of crisis. The essays are “critical” in their attention to how power operates in the spheres of politics, culture and education as a veil that hides various mechanisms of influence and control. These mechanisms, like cogs in a well-oiled machine, turn quietly and consistently, forming the backdrop against which the drama of daily life unfolds. Although the essays in this collection can stand on their own, they are in deep, yet not always obvious, conversations with each other. A discussion about the trials, tribulations, and triumphs of living with and caring for a child with Type 1 Diabetes merges into trenchant examinations of Trumpism, neofascism and white supremacy, which then dovetails into a cultural study of boots and sexuality. Disparate and wide-ranging in subject matter, these essays weave together a story about what it means to live an engaged life.

This book explores the areas in which novels such as Chariton's Callirhoe and Heliodorus's Aithiopika are ideal beyond the ideal love relationship and considers how concepts of the ideal connect to archetypal and literary patterns as well as reflecting contemporary ideological and cultural elements. Readers will gain a better understanding of how necessary is an understanding of these ideal elements to a full understanding of the novels' possible readings and their reader's attitudes. This book sets forth critical methods, subsequently followed, which allows for this exploration of ideal themes. The book will be an invaluable resource for scholars of these novels, as well as ancient narratives and classical literature more generally. Scholars of cultural and utopian studies will also find the book useful, as well as some undergraduate students in all these areas.

Julia Berger
Rethinking Religion and Politics in a Plural World: The Baha'i International Community and the United Nations
Bloomsbury Publishing, 2021
Professor Berger is in the Department of Religion.

This book examines internal meaning-making structures and processes driving NGO behavior, identifying constructs from within a religious tradition that forge new ways of pursuing social change. The author evaluates the operation of a distinct rationality, arguing that action is guided not simply by beliefs and values, but also by a combination of elements so intrinsic as to constitute an "organizational DNA." These hidden structures and rationalities manifest themselves in new modes of engagement and agency; they help us to see the pivotal role of religion in shaping notions of peace, progress and modernity. To demonstrate the operation and salience of such a rationality, the author draws on the example of the worldwide Baha'i community. Emerging in 19th-century Iran, the community's theological engagement with questions of justice, the unity of humankind, and the emerging global order, constitute one of the most distinct and compelling, yet least-researched examples of religious engagement with the pressing questions of our time. Analyzing events spanning a 75-year period from 1945-2020, this book provides a unique historical and contemporary perspective on the evolving role of religion and civil society in the modern world.

Gender Bonds, Gender Binds: Women, Men, and Family in Middle High German Literature
De Gruyter, 2021
PT179 .G46 2021
Professor Beringer is in the Department of Classics and General Humanities.

While Gender Studies has made its mark on literary studies, much scholarship on the German Middle Ages is largely inaccessible to the Anglo-American audience. With gender at its core as a category of analysis, this book uniquely opens up medieval German material to English speakers. Recognizing the impact of Ann Marie Rasmussen's Mothers and Daughters in Medieval German Literature, this transatlantic volume expands on questions introduced in her 1997 book and subsequent work. More than a mere tribute, the collection moves the debates forward in new directions: it examines how gender bonds together people, practices, texts and interpretive traditions, while constraining and delimiting these things socially, ideologically, culturally or historically. As the contributions demonstrate, a close, materially focused analysis produces complex results, not easily reduced to a platitude.

Gender Threat: American Masculinity in the Face of Change
Stanford University Press, 2022
HQ1090.3 .C385 2022
Professor Besen-Cassino is in the Department of Sociology.

Against all evidence to the contrary, American men have come to believe that the world is tilted – economically, socially, politically – against them. A majority of men across the political spectrum feel that they face some amount of discrimination because of their sex. The authors look at what reasoning lies behind their belief and how they respond to it. Many feel that there is a limited set of socially accepted ways for men to express their gender identity, and when circumstances make it difficult or impossible for them to do so, they search for another outlet to compensate. Sometimes these behaviors are socially positive, such as placing a greater emphasis on fatherhood, but other times they can be maladaptive, as in the case of increased sexual harassment at work. These trends have emerged, notably, since the Great Recession of 2008-09. Drawing on multiple data sources, the authors find that the specter of threats to their gender identity has important implications for men’s behavior. Importantly, younger men are more likely to turn to nontraditional compensatory behaviors, such as increased involvement in cooking, parenting and community leadership, suggesting that the conception of masculinity is likely to change in the decades to come.

Shannan Clark
The Making of the American Creative Class: New York’s Culture Workers and Twentieth-Century Consumer Capitalism
Oxford University Press, 2021
Professor Clark is in the Department of History.

During the middle decades of the 20th century, the production of America’s consumer culture was centralized in midtown Manhattan to an extent unparalleled in the history of the modern United States. Within a few square miles of skyscrapers were the headquarters of networks like NBC and CBS, the editorial offices of book publishers and mass circulation magazines such as Time and Life, numerous influential newspapers, and major advertising agencies on Madison Avenue. Every day tens of thousands of white-collar workers made advertisements, produced media content, and enhanced the appearance of goods in order to boost sales. While this center of creativity has often been portrayed as a smoothly running machine, within these offices many white-collar workers challenged the managers and executives who directed their labors. This book examines these workers and their industries throughout the 20th century. As manufacturers and retailers competed to attract consumers’ attention, their advertising expenditures financed the growth of enterprises engaged in the production of culture, which in turn provided employment for an increasing number of clerical, technical, professional and creative workers. The book explores employees’ efforts to improve their working conditions by forming unions, experimenting with alternative media and cultural endeavors supported by public, labor or cooperative patronage, and expanding their opportunities for creative autonomy. As blacklisting and attacks on militant unions left them destroyed or weakened, workers were constrained in their ability to respond to economic dislocations and to combat discrimination in the culture industries.

A Notable Bully: Colonel Billy Wilson, Masculinity, and the Pursuit of Violence in the Civil War Era

The Kent State University Press, 2021

F128.47 .C885 2021

Professor Cray is in the Department of History.

Largely forgotten by historians, Billy Wilson (1822-1874) was a giant in his time, a man well known throughout New York City, a man shaped by the city’s immigrant culture, its harsh voting practices and its efforts to participate in the War for the Union. For decades, Wilson’s name made headlines – for many different reasons – in the city’s major newspapers. An immigrant who settled in New York in 1842, Wilson found work as a prizefighter, a shoulder hitter, an immigrant runner, and a pawnbroker, before finally entering politics and being elected an alderman. He harnessed his tough persona to good advantage, in 1861 becoming a colonel in command of a regiment of alleged toughs and ex-convicts known as the “Wilson Zouaves.” A poor disciplinarian, however, Wilson exercised little control over his soldiers, and in 1863, unable to maintain order, he was jailed for a number of weeks. Nonetheless, Wilson returned home to a hero’s welcome that year. Wilson left behind no personal papers, journals, or correspondences, so the author has woven together a record of Wilson’s life using the only available records: newspaper stories. These accounts present Wilson as a fascinating but highly unlikable man. As the author demonstrates, Wilson bullied his way into New York, bullied his way into fame and politics, and attempted to bully his way into military greatness. His story depicts the New York City and Civil War experience in bolder, darker hues. It was not always a pretty tale.

Statistics: A Tool for Social Research and Data Analysis

Cengage Learning, 2021

HA29 .H435 2021

Professor Donoghue is in the Department of Sociology.

This book equips readers with a solid understanding of statistical fundamentals and their practical application to current social issues – no advanced math knowledge required. The text breaks down even the most complex material to help readers master key concepts and develop the skills needed for a professional in a social science field – or simply to become a “statistically literate” consumer of social research. Everyday examples illustrate that statistics are not just abstract mathematical constructs, but they have practical value in government, education, business, media, politics, sports and more. Research examples in every chapter include the same “real data” used by professionals across various fields to make evidence-based decisions.

American Women’s Regionalist Fiction: Mapping the Gothic

Palgrave Macmillan, 2021

Professor Elbert is in the Department of English.

This book seeks to redress the monolithic view of a national American Gothic, instead considering specific regions in the U.S. and how they express their own particular versions of the Gothic. Focusing on American women writers whose views of hauntings are ultimately connected to their image of an internal and oftentimes oppressive domestic landscape, these essays consider the ways the outdoor landscape feeds their fantasy and contributes to their notion of a natural history and local mythology that coincides with their sense of a world beyond the confines of the home. The clash between these two realms often paves the way for the Gothic encounter. Ultimately, these essays reveal the impact of the regional Gothic in considering how collision between the local and the national precipitates a conflict that leads to the Gothic protagonist’s sense of belonging or alienation.

Reframing Japonisme: Women and the Asian Art Market in Nineteenth-Century France (1853-1914)

Bloomsbury Visual Arts, 2020

Professor Emery is in the Department of World Languages and Cultures.

This volume brings to light the culturally important, yet largely forgotten activities of women such as Clemence d’Ennery (1823-1898), who began collecting Japanese and Chinese chimeras in the 1840s, built and decorated a house for them in the 1870s, and bequeathed the “Musee d’Ennery” to the state as a free public museum in 1893. A friend of the Goncourt brothers and a 50-year patron of Parisian dealers of Asian art, d’Ennery’s struggles to gain recognition as a collector and curator serve as a lens through which to examine the collecting and display practices of other women of her day. Travelers to Japan such as the Duchesse de Persigny, Isabella Stewart Gardner and Laure Durand-Fardel returned with souvenirs that they shared with friends and family. Salon hostesses including Juliette Adam, Louise Cahen d’Anvers, Princesse Mathilde and Marguerite Charpentier provided venues for the discussion and examination of Japanese art objects, as did well-known art dealers Madame Desoye, Madame Malinet, Madame Hatty, and Madame Langweil. Writers, actresses and artists Judith Gautier, Ther se Bentzon, Sarah Bernhardt and Mary Cassatt, to name just a few took inspiration from the Japanese material in circulation to create their own unique works of art. Largely absent from the history of Japonisme, these women and many others actively collected Japanese art, interacted with auction houses and art dealers, and formed collections now at the heart of museums such as the Louvre, the Musee Guimet, the Musee Cernuschi, the Musee Unterlinden and the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

In 1996, the state of Kerala launched possibly the world's most extensive and successful experiment in decentralization. The campaign mobilized over 3 million of Kerala's 30 million people and resulted in bottom-up development planning in all of its 1,052 villages and urban neighborhoods. This book details the background of the campaign, traces its stages, assesses problems and successes, and evaluates concrete results and reforms. It tells a powerful story of mass mobilization and innovation, achieved by overcoming bureaucratic opposition and rooting out corruption and cynicism.

New Evidence of Trotsky's Conspiracy
Erythros Press and Media, 2020
DK254.T6 F8686 2020
Professor Furr is in the Department of English.

This book is a study of Soviet-era documents, recently declassified, that bear on Leon Trotsky and his conspiracies against the Soviet government and Party during the 1930s. These documents are: Yuri Piatakov's statement to Nikolai Ezhov, chief of the NKVD, of December 1920, 1936; the transcript of the trial of Marshal Mikhail N. Tukhachevsky and seven accomplices of June 11, 1937; and a collection of investigative materials from the former NKVD archive concerning the First and Second Moscow Trials of August, 1936, and January, 1937. The third set of documents are from the two-volume work Politbiuro i Lev Trotskii (sbornik dokumentov), 1923-1940, edited by Oleg V. Mozokhin and published in 2013 in Prague, Czechoslovakia, by Sociosféra-CZ. This two-volume work is essentially unobtainable.

Trotsky and the Military Conspiracy: Soviet and Non-Soviet Evidence; With the Complete Transcript of the "Tukhachevsky Affair" Trial
Erythros Press and Media, 2021
DK267 .F87 2021

The principal document presented here is the complete translation of the transcript of the trial of the defendants in the "Tukhachevsky Affair" – Marshal of the Soviet Union Mikhail N. Tukhachevsky and his seven co-defendants, all top-ranking Red Army officers. It provides yet more convincing primary-source evidence that the military conspiracy collaborated with Nazi Germany in coordination with Leon Trotsky and his supporters. Properly understood, this document book overturns the mainstream history of the Soviet Union, of World War II, and in important respects, the mainstream history of the world, in the 20th century. The other chapters contain confirmatory evidence, with careful and appropriate analysis. They are important, because dishonest historians will claim that Tukhachevsky et al. were not guilty; rather that they were "framed." They will further claim that Leon Trotsky, who is deeply implicated in the Military Conspiracy, was also "framed." These claims are demonstrably false. This book presents the evidence.

Roger II of Sicily:

Family, Faith, and Empire in the Medieval Mediterranean World

Brepols, 2020

DG867.25 .H39 2020

Professor Hayes is in the Department of History.

Roger II (c. 1095-1154), Sicily's first king, was an anomaly for his time. An ambitious new ruler who lacked the distinguished lineage so prized by the nobility, and a leader of an extraordinarily diverse population on the fringes of Europe, he occupied a unique space in the continent's charged political landscape. This interdisciplinary study examines the strategies that Roger used to legitimize his authority, including his relationships with contemporary rulers, the familial connections that he established through no less than three marriages, and his devotion to the Church and Saint Nicholas of Myra/Bari. Yet while Roger and his family made the most of their geographic and cultural contexts, it is convincingly argued here that they nonetheless retained a strong western focus, and that behind the diverse mélange of Norman Sicily were very occidental interests. Drawing together sources of political, social, and religious history from locations as disparate as Spain and the Byzantine Empire, as well as evidence from the magnificent churches and elaborate mosaics constructed during his reign, this volume offers a fascinating portrait of a figure whose rule was characterized both by great potential and devastating tragedy. Indeed, had Roger been able to accomplish his ambitious agenda, the history of the medieval Mediterranean world would have unfolded very differently.

Smoke But No Fire:

Convicting the Innocent of Crimes That Never Happened

University of California Press, 2020

Professor Henry is in the Department of Justice Studies.

Rodricus Crawford was convicted and sentenced to die for the murder by suffocation of his beautiful baby boy. After years on death row, evidence confirmed what Crawford had claimed all along: he was innocent, and his son had died from an undiagnosed illness. Crawford is not alone. A full one-third of all known exonerations stem from no-crime wrongful convictions. The first book to explore this common but previously undocumented type of wrongful conviction, this volume tells the heartbreaking stories of innocent people convicted of crimes that simply never happened. A suicide is mislabeled a homicide. An accidental fire is mislabeled an arson. Corrupt police plant drugs on an innocent suspect. A false allegation of assault is invented to resolve a custody dispute. With this book, the author, a former New York City public defender, sheds essential light on a deeply flawed criminal justice system that allows – even encourages – these convictions to regularly occur. This book promises to be eye-opening reading for legal professionals, students, activists and the general public alike as it grapples with the chilling reality that far too many innocent people spend real years behind bars for fictional crimes.

Art Cinema and Neoliberalism

Palgrave Macmillan, 2020

PN1995.9.P6 L94 2020

Professor Lykidis is in the Department of English.

This book surveys cinematic responses to neoliberalism across four continents. One of the first in-depth studies of its kind, this book provides an imaginative reassessment of art cinema in the new millennium by showing how the exigencies of contemporary capitalism are exerting pressure on art cinema conventions. Through a careful examination of neoliberal thought and practice, the book explores the wide-ranging effects of neoliberalism on various sectors of society and on the evolution of film language. The author evaluates the relevance of art cinema style to explanations of the neoliberal order and uses a case study approach to analyze the films of acclaimed directors such as Asghar Farhadi, Yorgos Lanthimos and Lucrecia Martel in relation to the social, political and cultural characteristics of neoliberalism. By connecting the aesthetics of art cinema to current social antagonisms, the author positions class as a central concern in our understanding of the polarized dynamics of late capitalism and the escalating provocations of today's film auteurs.

Each chapter takes a different theme as its focus: forms and media; sites of performance and circulation; communities of production and consumption; philosophy and social theory; religion, ritual and myth; politics of city and nation; society and family; and gender and sexuality.

A Struggle for Heritage:

Archaeology and Civil Rights in a Long Island Community

University Press of Florida, 2020

Professor Matthews is in the Department of Anthropology.

Based on 10 years of collaborative, community-based research, this book examines race and racism in a mixed-heritage Native American and African American community on Long Island's north shore. Through excavations of the Silas Tobias and Jacob and Hannah Hart houses in the village of Setauket, the author explores how the families who lived here struggled to survive and preserve their culture despite consistent efforts to marginalize and displace them over the course of more than 200 years. He discusses these forgotten people and the artifacts of their daily lives within the larger context of race, labor and industrialization from the early 19th to the mid-20th century. The book draws on extensive archaeological, archival and oral historical research and sets a remarkable standard for projects that engage a descendant community left out of the dominant narrative. The author demonstrates how archaeology can be an activist voice for a vulnerable population's civil rights as he brings attention to the continuous, gradual and effective economic assault on people of color living in a traditional neighborhood amid gentrification. Providing examples of multiple approaches to documenting hidden histories and silenced pasts, this study is a model for public and professional efforts to include and support the preservation of historic communities of color.

Catch-22 was published in 1961, becoming a number-one bestseller in England before American audiences identified with its anti-war sentiments, earning it classic status and prompting a film version in 1970. Heller's dark, satirical novel became so ubiquitous that it initiated the eponymous phrase regarding paradoxical situations. The book is appreciated for its black humor, extensive use of flashbacks, contorted chronology, countercultural sensibilities and bizarre language structures. Examining Images of Urban Life:

A Resource for Teachers of Young Adult Literature

Myers Education Press, 2021

There are novels that portray cities as magical places, others as stifling, imposing environments, and others still as a gritty but beautiful, living landscape. Cities can be the center of culture, business, the arts, and are the meeting places for diversities of all kinds. This book gathers contributions from scholars, educators and young adult authors, like Benjamin Alire Saenz and E. Charlton-Trujillo, who consider how living in a city affects character identity and growth, and the ways authors world-build the urban setting. The collection discusses what the urban landscape means, and dispels the media-driven, anecdotally propagated preconceptions about city living. Urban life is varied and rich, just as its literature is. The collection revolves around a reconsideration of what the city represents, to its readers and to its inhabitants, and serves as a resource in urban settings, wherein teachers can select books that mirror and advocate for the students sitting in their classes.

Liberal Quaker Reconciliation Theology: A Constructive Approach

Brill, 2020

Professor Randazzo is in the Department of Religion.

This work brings the fields of Christian theologies of atonement and reconciliation and Liberal Quaker theology into dialogue, and lays the foundation for developing an original Liberal Quaker reconciliation theology. This dialogue focuses specifically on the metaphorical language employed to describe the relationship of interdependence between humans and God, which both traditions hold as integral to their conceptions of human and divine existence. It focuses on these areas: the sin of human division and exclusion; atonement and reunification of humans and God as a response to sin; and the metaphors Liberal Quaker use to describe this interdependent relationship, specifically the metaphor of Light. This unique approach develops an original model of reconciliatory interdependence between humans and God that is rooted in both Christological and Universalist Liberal Quaker metaphorical and theological categories and utilizes the Liberal Quaker language of God as interdependent Light towards a new theology.

Professor Redouane is in the Department of World Languages and Cultures.

Prendre en compte le développement et l'évolution de l'écriture féminine maghrébine contemporaine apparaît nécessaire. L'argument en faveur d'une telle attitude consiste à indiquer l'existence d'une production considérable dans les trois pays du Maghreb, mais qui demeure méconnue ou ignorée par la critique qui continue à ne privilégier que certaines écrivaines, souvent trop médiatisées. L'objectif de cet ouvrage n'est pas de tenter l'impossible gageure de présenter ce foisonnement littéraire caractéristique de l'écriture féminine maghrébine de l'extrême contemporain. Les études présentées ici concernent plus particulièrement: Meryem Alaoui, Fatna El Bouih, Souad Jamaï, Salima Louafa, Saïda Mounaïme et Damia Oumassine (Maroc), Kaouther Adimi, Anya MÉRIMÈCHE Lynda-Nawel Tebbani et Fatma-Zohra Zamoum (Algérie), Yesmine Karray, Sonia Mabrouk et Monya Zwawi (Tunisie). Notre but est de faire connaître certaines écrivaines appartenant à cette nouvelle génération pour affirmer que la richesse de la littérature féminine maghrébine contemporaine est remarquable. De fait, elle mérite une considération particulière de la part de la critique et nous espérons que ce volume y contribuera.

Women Philosophers Volume I:
Education and Activism in Nineteenth-Century America

Bloomsbury Academic, 2020
Professor Rogers is in the Department of Religion.

Illuminating a significant moment in the development of both American and feminist philosophical history, this book explores the pioneering thought of the women in the early American Idealist movement and outgrowths of it in the late 19th century. The author specifically examines the ideas of women who entered philosophical discourse through education and social activism. She begins by discussing innovative educators, some of whom were members of the influential Idealist movement in St. Louis, Missouri, in the 1860s and 70s. She then looks at the ideas and impact of women who were independent scholars and social and political activists. Throughout the volume, the author explores how Idealist thought developed, matured, and was transformed over time across lines of race, culture and socio-economic class. Several of the women discussed were ardent feminists and activists – Mary Church Terrell, Anna C. Brackett, Grace C. Bibb, Ana Roqu, Ellen M. Mitchell, Lucia Ames Mead, Jane Addams, Ida B. Wells-Barnett and Luisa Capetillo. By providing exciting new insights into the work of these early women philosophers and introducing the next generation of women who shared the same ideals and influences, the author deftly elucidates the genealogy of women's thought as it developed across North America.

Presidential Rhetoric on Terrorism under Bush, Obama and Trump: Inflating and Calibrating the Threat After 9/11

Palgrave Macmillan, 2020
Professor Rubin is in the Department of Justice Studies.

Through the analysis of 18 years of presidential data, this book shows how Presidents Bush, Obama and Trump have conducted and framed the war on terror since its inception in 2001. Examining all presidential speeches about terrorism from George W. Bush's two terms as president, Barack Obama's two terms as president, and Donald Trump's first year as president, this book is the first to compare the three post-9/11 presidents in how they have dealt with the terror threat. The book argues that when policies need to be “sold” to the public and Congress, presidents make their pertinent issues seem urgent through frequent speech-making and threat inflation. It further illustrates how after policies are sold, a new president's reticence may signify quiet acceptance of the old regime's approach. After examining the conduct of the war on terror to date, it concludes by posing policy suggestions for the future.

The volume looks at how migrants and terrorists have both been treated as Others outside the body politic, how growing migrant flows borne of a rickety state system cause both natives and migrants to turn violent, and how terrorist radicalization and tensions between natives and migrants can be reduced. As he contemplates potential global futures in the light of migration and radicalization, the author charts a course between contemporary migration and terrorism scholarship, exploring their interactions in a methodologically rigorous but theoretically bold investigation.

Essentials of Job Attitudes and Other Workplace Psychological Constructs

Routledge, 2021

Professor Sessa is in the Department of Psychology.

Although the topic of job attitudes and other workplace psychological constructs such as perceptions, identity, bonds and motivational states is important, there are no books addressing the topic as a whole. This book seeks to fill that void in a comprehensive edited volume that compiles chapters by experts on each construct. The book begins with a review of the concept of job attitudes and other workplace psychological constructs, then devotes a single chapter to each construct. These chapters focus on organizational justice, perceived organizational support, organizational identification, job involvement, workplace commitments, job embeddedness, job satisfaction, employee engagement and team-related work attitudes. Each of these chapters addresses parallel content including definitions, history, theory, a critique of the field to date with future research recommendations, and how the given construct can be used in practice. There are two additional features that make this book unique: first, each chapter provides a nomological network figure of the workplace psychological construct addressed; and second, each chapter provides one or more of the current measures used to assess the construct of interest.

All for Liberty: The Charleston Workhouse Slave Rebellion of 1849

Cambridge University Press, 2022

F279.C457 S77 2022

Professor Strickland is in the Department of History.

This book tells the powerful story of Nicholas Kelly, the enslaved craftsman who led the Charleston Workhouse Slave Rebellion, the largest slave revolt in the history of the antebellum American South. With two accomplices, some sledgehammers and pickaxes, Kelly risked his life and helped 36 fellow enslaved people escape the workhouse where they had been sent by their enslavers to be tortured. While Nat Turner, Gabriel Prosser and Denmark Vesey remain the most recognizable rebels, the pivotal role of Nicholas Kelly is often forgotten. The book centers his rebellion as a decisive moment leading up to the secession of South Carolina from the United States in 1861. This compelling micro-history navigates between Kelly's story and the Age of Atlantic Revolutions, while also considering the parallels between race and incarceration in the 19th century and in modern America.

Multi-Tiered Systems of Support: Implementation Tools for Speech-Language Pathologists in Education

Plural Publishing, 2021

Professor Sylvan is in the Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders.

Many school-based speech-language pathologists (SLPs) deal with large caseloads and limited resources. Taking on additional workload by implementing multi-tiered systems of support (MTSS) can seem overwhelming. This book offers practical, research-based tools that school-based SLPs can use to balance the high demands of their job with supporting general education students. This professional resource provides answers to a range of questions about policy implications, applicability of the framework to a SLP's role in schools, and how an SLP can implement MTSS in their practice. Part I breaks down the important concepts of MTSS, while Part II is designed as an SLP MTSS Toolkit, featuring the collective wisdom of practitioners and researchers in the field. Throughout the text, readers will also find real-world snapshots of MTSS in action based on the experiences of actual SLPs in the field.

Brazil's Revolution in Commerce:
Creating Consumer Capitalism in the American Century

The University of North Carolina Press, 2020

Professor Woodard is in the Department of History.

This history of consumer capitalism in Brazil, today the world's fifth most populous country, is at once magisterial, intimate and penetrating enough to serve as a history of modern Brazil itself. It tells how a new economic outlook took hold over the course of the 20th century, a time when the United States became Brazil's most important trading partner and the tastemaker of its better-heeled citizens. In a cultural entangling with the United States, Brazilians saw Chevrolets and Fords replace horse-drawn carriages, railroads lose to a mania for cheap automobile roads, and the fabric of everyday existence rewoven as commerce reached into the deepest spheres of family life. The United States loomed large in this economic transformation, but American consumer culture was not merely imposed on Brazilians. By the 70s, many elements once thought of as American had slipped their exotic traces and become Brazilian, and this process illuminates how the culture of consumer capitalism became a more genuinely transnational and globalized phenomenon. This commercial and cultural turn is the great untold story of Brazil's 20th century, and one key to its 21st.

Offenders: Never Free of Collateral Consequences

Routledge, 2021

Professor Zilney is in the Department of Justice Studies.

This work is an exploratory examination of the experiences, motivations, and coping mechanisms of women who are involved in intimate relationships with registered sexual offenders. The study focuses both on women who were involved with an offender prior to the commission of his offense and who stayed with him post-conviction, and on women who became involved with a registered offender after his sex offense conviction. Like the offender himself, these women face a variety of challenges in responding to treatment of them by friends, family, the community and the criminal justice system. Utilizing the results of intensive interviews, this work provides a unique look at the women who are one of the few sources of support for registered sexual offenders and assesses the effectiveness and wide-ranging implications of community notification and registration laws on public safety, policy and practice. This work offers alternative approaches based on evidence and case studies and considers the significance of familial contact in buffering sexual recidivism. These women are the heretofore unstudied victims of sexual offending legislation. This book is essential reading for those in sociology, criminology, psychology and social work. For undergraduate or graduate students, practitioners, researchers or policy makers, this thought-provoking book will shed light on how to optimize the reintegration of sex offenders. It assesses the effectiveness and wide-ranging implications of sex offender legislation on public safety, policy, and practice and considers alternative approaches to reduce sexual violence.

The publication of this book is a historical milestone marked by the commemoration of the bicentenary of the outbreak of the Greek Revolution of 1821 and the War of National Independence. The book was written as a homage to members of the author's village, Vayia, Greece, who fought for Greek independence. The book will give the reader the opportunity to learn about the history of many battles for independence by the Greeks from the Ottoman Empire from 1821-1829. The work contains the names of all the known fighters from the villages of Vayia, Kasnesi and Morokambi (Boeotia), many of whom lost their lives. This tribute is the minimum honor to all the heroic, anonymous dead who gave their lives, to the anonymous and known fighters of the National War of Independence, as well as to the widows and orphans.

Professor Campanella is in the Department of Biology.

Police psychologist Edwardo Bratenahl is a young widower, still mourning the tragic loss of his wife. Bratenahl, an academic and native of the insular Cleveland neighborhood of Little Italy, is asked to assist with the homicide investigation of world-class geneticist Dr. Simon Pederson, who was viciously slain during Sunday mass. Bratenahl is partnered with Mary Kate Calderon, veteran homicide detective. The two soon discover a related murder, which Calderon confesses looks eerily like a scenario she witnessed as a child in Nicaragua, with all the hallmarks of a Sandinista interrogator dubbed Diablo Rojo. Bratenahl brushes this off as coincidence, but the psychologist soon discovers just how perilous the world around him is, as he collides with the Red Devil, Simon Pederson's legacy of destruction, and the weight of family history in this twisty, dark police procedural.

Rails to Sterling Forest: the History of the Erie's Greenwood Lake Division

Garbely Publishing Company, 2020

TF24.N5 O47 2020

Kevin Olsen is Chemistry Instrument/Research Technician, Chemistry and Biochemistry.

This extensive history of the Erie Railroad's Greenwood Lake Division covers everything from the railroad's construction as the Montclair Railway in the 1870s through its subsequent reorganizations as the Montclair & Greenwood Lake Railway and later the New York & Greenwood Lake Railway. The line's eventual acquisition by the Erie gives way to the Erie Lackawanna merger, Conrail, and the line's current use by NJ Transit. With over 100 pages of text supplemented by a plethora of historic black & white and color photos and reproduced documents, this is the definitive story of rail service along a scenic New Jersey route.

Teaching and Learning of Fluid Mechanics

MDPI, 2020

QA901 .T42 2020

Professor Vaidya is in the Department of Mathematics.

This book contains research on the pedagogical aspects of fluid mechanics and includes case studies, lesson plans, articles on historical aspects of fluid mechanics, and novel and interesting experiments and theoretical calculations that convey complex ideas in creative ways. The current volume showcases the teaching practices of fluid dynamicists from different disciplines, ranging from mathematics, physics, mechanical engineering, and environmental engineering to chemical engineering. The suitability of these articles ranges from early undergraduate to graduate level courses and can be read by faculty and students alike.

China's Urban Agglomerations

Springer, 2020

Professor Yu is in the Department of Earth and Environmental Studies.

The book combs through extensively 32,231 urban agglomeration related works during the past 120 years to explore a theoretically supported and practically based definition of urban agglomeration. Based on the definition, the authors explore intensively the fundamental characteristics, spatiotemporal differentiation properties, and existing issues for China's sustainable urban agglomeration development for the past 35 years. The study proposes that China shall focus on the construction and sustainable development of five primary national-level urban agglomerations. In the meantime, China shall also steadily and gradually construct nine regional urban agglomerations and guide the development and growth of six local urban agglomerations. In the long run, China will have a hierarchical “5+9+6” closely integrated hierarchical urban agglomeration spatial structure. The study also proposes to coordinate the construction and development of urban agglomerations on the “two belts and one road” to form a national new urbanization development strategic pattern that enables “the axis to connect the agglomerations while the agglomerations support the axis.” Furthermore, the study investigates a variety of strategic thinking and suggestions for creating innovative, green and ecologically friendly, intelligent, low-carbon, open, culture-oriented, market-oriented and shared urban agglomerations in China.

International Auditing Standards in the United States: Comparing and Understanding Standards for ISA and PCAOB
Business Expert Press, 2021
HF5616.U5 A523 2021
Professor Kleinman is in the Department of Accounting and Finance.

International Standards on Auditing (ISA) are standards or guidelines that auditors follow when conducting a financial audit of a company's financial statements in those jurisdictions that have adopted ISAs or some version of ISAs. These standards are issued by the International Federation of Accountants through the International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board. ISA covers a wide variety of ground. It designates specific responsibilities of an auditor including how to plan an audit; how to evaluate and conclude on the adequacies of internal controls; how to evaluate audit evidence and draw conclusions from it and how to write an audit report. These are just some of the designated responsibilities among a wide range of auditing requirements. The U.S., on the other hand, has its own auditing standards: the so-called Generally Accepted Auditing Standards set forth by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA) for use in private company audits; and the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, standards which apply to the audits of publicly-owned corporations. The problem for both practitioners and students is that the auditing principles of the ISA and the AICPA are not identical, even though they are moving toward convergence, or at least attempting to do so.

Marketing in Healthcare-Related Industries
Information Age Publishing, Inc., 2020
Professor Limbu is in the Department of Marketing.

Healthcare delivery and the healthcare industry in the 21st century face a multiplicity of challenges. These include changing disease patterns, more technology-driven health interventions, a more assertive and quality conscious clientele, as well as a rapidly growing for-profit segment of the industry. This places more responsibilities on healthcare service providers in both the public and private sectors to deliver value-for-money services at competitive costs. To respond to this, a carefully crafted marketing approach is needed by all players in the industry to sustain the confidence of its clientele. This book captures the concepts and complexities of marketing healthcare in today's environment.

Liquidity, Markets and Trading in Action: An Interdisciplinary Perspective
Springer Publishing, 2022
HB171.5 .O94 2022

Professor Ozenbas is in the Department of Accounting and Finance.

This open access book addresses four standard business school subjects: microeconomics, macroeconomics, finance and information systems as they relate to trading, liquidity and market structure. It provides a detailed examination of the impact of trading costs and other impediments of trading that the authors call “frictions.” It also presents an interactive simulation model of equity market trading, TraderEx, that enables students to implement trading decisions in different market scenarios and structures. Addressing these topics shines a bright light on how a real-world financial market operates, and the simulation provides students with an experiential learning opportunity that is informative and fun. Each of the chapters is designed so that it can be used as a stand-alone module in an existing economics, finance or information science course.

Hybrid Project Management: Using Agile with Traditional PM Methodologies to Succeed on Modern Projects
Business Expert Press, 2020
HD69.P75 T65 2020
Professor Parente is in the Department of Information Management and Business Analytics.

Compared to a few decades ago, companies today are faced with a much more challenging environment providing successful products and solutions for their customers. They are dealing with global competition, very rapid change in technologies, and tremendous volatility in economic conditions. As project managers, we are helping our companies survive in this difficult landscape. We are “agents of change” and “drivers of change.” The most important project management methodology today that will help us deal with this change and this volatility is Agile. However, no one process or project management methodology fits all situations. Agile is not a panacea for all projects. Many times, our projects are large enough and complex enough that some parts of the project are best suited to using a predictive planning approach, and other parts are more suited to using Agile. Therefore, a hybrid approach that mixes the traditional, waterfall approach with Agile is really required in many situations today. The Agile community oftentimes has quite a negative view of hybrid approaches. Key writers on Agile often say that attempting to use hybrid will corrupt all attempts to use Agile, and will result in failure. In this book, the argument is made that integrating these methodologies can be done if approached the right way, and in fact, this is necessary today.

Te Wu
Optimizing Project Management

CRC Press, 2020
Professor Wu is in the Department of Management.

This hands-on guide is written for project professionals seeking to find an optimized way of performing project management. It provides answers to such critical questions as: Why should an organization apply project management? What is the value of project management in the broader context of an organization? Is project management as successful as some advocates suggested or is it a waste of time and resources because of the many extensive and bureaucratic processes? Which project management approach should our project team adopt: predictive or adaptive, waterfall or rolling water, extreme programming or Scrum? This book aims to provide an optimized view of project management by balancing and blending competing methodologies (e.g., traditional versus Agile), lengthy methodologies and broad principles, processes and practices, and the need to understand versus the need to apply. It includes project management templates, an integrated case study illustrating how to apply tools and concepts, and a glossary of key terms. This book is for both aspiring and practicing project management professionals. It covers the core concepts, practices, and skills that are useful for developing new ideas, planning activities, implementing projects, and conducting planning and controlling of schedule, budget and scope.

A Sensible Guide to Program Management Professional (PgMP)® Success

CRC Press, 2021
HD69.P75 W8 2021

This book is for program managers preparing to take the PgMP exam based on The Standard for Program Management – 4th Edition (PgM4 Standard). It is designed for busy professionals whose responsibilities have taken them into the realm of coordinating, facilitating, managing and leading programs. Program managers are leaders who are directly managing large amounts of project resources for their organizations. This study guide addresses three main concerns facing PgMP exam candidates: What are the essential concepts, processes and tools that form the foundation of today’s program management? Since program management is still an emerging profession with professionals often working in different ways, what does this mean for a “standard” exam? More specifically, how does that impact your ability to pass the PgMP exam? What is the best way to prepare for the PgMP exam? To address the first concern, this book highlights the underlying rationale for program management: why it exists in organizations; why it is becoming ever more important; what programs are, especially for the purpose of passing the exam; how to think like a portfolio manager; and what the most important concepts, processes and tools are for this profession.

Mor and Me: Life, Language, and Love in Letters from Denmark

2020

DL120 .G74 2020

Lise Greene is a retired administrative staff.

Sixty-one diaries and countless blue air letters tell the story of Ina's life, beginning at age 15, the occupation of her country, Denmark, by the Nazis; her postwar work with the interrogation of prisoners in Copenhagen and at the International Military Tribunal for War Crimes in Germany; a whirlwind courtship with an American; and her new life in the United States. After Ina dies, her four adult children yearn to know more about their mother's life pre-parenthood as well as their own childhoods. But the diaries and letters are all in Danish, and none of them can read or speak their mother's tongue. This book is the true story of one daughter who decides to live in Denmark and learn the language. A diarist and letter-writer like Mor (her mother), Lise emails family and friends with vivid, poignant, honest and humorous descriptions of her outward and inward journeys through an unforgettable year and a half.
