* Fall figures include doctorate -seeking students. In '99 there were 39 applications, 31 completed applications, 15 doctoral students were accepted, and 15 doctoral students enrolled. In '00 there were 25 applications, 16 completed applications, 7 doctoral students were accepted, and 7 enrolled. In '01, there were 12 applications, 7 completed applications, 6 accepted, and 3 enrolled.

 Certificate programs include Child Advocacy, CISCO, Collaborative Teaching for Inclusive Settings, Molecular Biology, Object Oriented Computing, Paralegal Studies, Translation & Interpretation in Spanish, and Water Resource Management.

 The numbers in this report do not include 125 students who registered for courses as non-degree students as a result of a new Graduate School recruitment initiative started in August 1999. The new initiative encouraged students who had incomplete fall 1999 application files for a degree or certification program to enroll as non-degree students once they met non-degree requirements without submitting another (non-degree) application. Future admission reports will incorporate this group of students. Please note these students were counted in the semester enrollment report.
